RMGC Welcomes New Community Relations Specialist

Rachel Ray is a native of Round Mountain and a second generation RMGC miner. She has held various positions at RMGC, but most recently took over as the Community Relations Specialist. Read more about her on page 2.

Introducing the New Community Relations Specialist

Meet Rachel Ray, the new Community Relations—Corporate Social Responsibility Specialist. As a native Round Mountainite, Rachel knows the importance of favorable corporate contributions within this remote community. She says she looks forward to making a positive impact in this new position.

Rachel grew up in Round Mountain and graduated from Round Mountain High School. Rachel has worked at the mine for nearly ten years. “I started as a haul truck operator in 2013, in 2014 I moved into a dispatcher role, in 2016 I moved to the Assay Lab, in 2021 I moved to the Administrative Assistant in the Mine Department. Then in 2023 I’m now in the Community Relations role,” she commented. This wife and mother of daughter Bella is a second generation miner. Her mom, Pam Franks, has been in mining in this community for 42 years. Mining runs deep in this family. So it’s no wonder that Rachel wants to make a difference in mining and in her community.

The Community Relations—CSR specialist’s responsibility is to develop positive relations between Kinross-RMGC and its external stakeholders. While Rachel is still new in her role, she looks forward to building and maintaining relationships with members of this community and the surrounding communities. Within the last few years, Kinross Nevada has extended its community footprint to surrounding areas like Duckwater, Tonopah, and Las Vegas.

Rachel has enjoyed helping in various projects over the last couple of years. “I’ve helped Sam with CSR events over the last 2 years and I’ve always had a good time helping her. I really enjoy helping people and being involved with sustaining the community that I grew up in,” she said.

Some projects that she has facilitated in her new role are the Knights cups at the school as well as the J4NG program there. She is also working together to plan the Harvest Festival with the Town of RM and the Library.

“I’m looking forward to being a bigger part in the success of Kinross and playing a bigger role in helping out our community.” ~Rachel Ray, Community Relations-CSR
