

Junior High Track Team Continues to Improve!

The Round Mountain Junior High Track team is on a roll! After a season of tireless effort and dedication, the team's hard work is paying off.

Under the guidance of Coach Mackenzie, they've shown significant improvement at each meet. A standout performance came when Sammy Penson placed 4th in both the discus and shot put at the latest meet. Kudos to Sammy and the entire team for their remarkable progress – you're seen and celebrated!

Blast from the Past: Nevada History

Stokes Castle: Near Austin, Nevada

Anson Phelps Stokes, mine developer, railroad magnate and member of a prominent eastern family, built Stokes Castle as a summer home for his sons. After the castle (or the tower, as the Stokes family always referred to it) was completed in June 1897, the Stokes family used it for two months. Since then, with one possible exception, the structure has remained unoccupied.

Stokes Castle is made of huge, granite stones, raised with a hand winch and held in position by rock wedging and clay mortar. The architectural model for the castle was a medieval tower Anson Stokes had seen and admired near Rome. This building originally had three floors, each with a fireplace, plate glass windows, balconies on the second and third floors, and a battlemented terrace on the roof. It had plumbing and sumptuous furnishings. Stokes Castle has served for decades as an iconic Nevada building often photographed by enthusiasts of Western history.
